Comrie: Aberuchill Hills. This is a grand double mountain range, and it would be difficult to find one more picturesque in Scotland. It has mass and height and striking variety of sky line. It combines a dense mantle of forest, grassy steeps and precipitous bare rocks. The colouring is exquisitely variable.

This is a grand mountain range, but it is difficult to find more picturesque. Ben Vorlich and Stuc-a-Chroin are the highest peaks, and the latter is a striking feature in the sky line. In the foreground are some fine masses of heather and bracken, and a coarse grassy slope, while the precipitous bare rocks form an excellent contrast.

Shall likely be here till Monday as the Rills are covered in mist & as my road lies away there I shall have a good till it clears. If there is anything by post it could be sent here & I could go to P.O. I shall look in there on Monday morning early.
